The supervisor and the shared story: A creative exploration of narrative constructions.
Through the act of sharing our stories, we create order in a chaotic world, ultimately asking: When does it matter that I am I, and what is that asking of me. Drawing on philosophy and narrative research, we move beyond simply listening to our supervisee toward witnessing, co-creating, and birthing new narratives. We will explore moments where our unique presence as supervisor and supervisee matters most. Participants will engage in creative exercises—from poetry to visual metaphors—to examine the natural affinity with narrative construction.

About Beatrijs Dijkman,
Beatrijs is a supervisor and educator based in the Netherlands who approaches her work with creativity, courage, and care. Her long-standing fascination with storytelling and narrative constructions is the heartbeat of her professional life. For this conference, she utilizes several sources of the narrative traditions to explore how storytelling can liven and restore the work of supervisors.
Beatrijs is Teaching and Supervising Transactional Analyst in Education (TSTA-E) and holds an MSc in Professional Development. She is a supervisor and teacher supervisor. Her work internationally as well as in the Netherlands focusses on working creatively and relationally with professionals.
